The Opportunity

Cato Networks is disrupting the $60B managed network services market, replacing the old "telco-bundle".

The Team

Cato co-founder and CEO, Shlomo Kramer, is one of the most successful cybersecurity entrepreneurs in the world. Shlomo co-founded Check Point Software and Imperva, and an early investor in Palo Alto Networks, Trusteer, and Exabeam. Cato co-founder and CTO, Gur Shatz, Cato Networks CTO, is co-founder of Incapsula, an innovative global cloud network for DDoS protection. Together they combine the network and security expertise to go after this huge market opportunity.

The Problem

Enterprises are facing a tough choice between running complex infrastructure with multiple network and security point solutions or paying heavily to service providers to "bundle it" for them.

The Solution

Cato replaces the complex, costly and rigid MPLS-based network architecture and the "telco-bundle" with a cloud-native and converged managed SD-WAN service with built in security and optimization. Customers can manage all facets of the network from a single self-service console or use a partner managed service. Like all cloud-services, Cato maintains the cloud platform without any customer or partner involvement.

The Proof Points

Cato has raised $125M to date from top tier venture capital firms. Since launching the service 3 years ago, Cato signed up over 400 enterprise customers, with thousands of global locations in production on the Cato Cloud.

Using the Cloud to Power New Services

Cato provides MSPs and IT resellers with a complete WAN transformation platform, delivered as a cloud service. You no longer have to cobble together, upgrade, patch, and manage multiple point solutions such as edge SD-WAN appliances, next-gen firewalls, cloud-based security services, WAN optimizers, or routers. Cato has built a complete global, cloud-native platform using globally distributed points of presence (PoPs) running the Cato network and security software stack. Cato converges the full range of services required to run a secure and optimized enterprise network. With Cato, you can address the customer's WAN edge, global, security, cloud, and mobility needs - using a single platform managed through a single multi-tenant management interface.
